WHISK(E)Y

The process of making whisky differs from region to region in Scotland. From the water, barley and yeast used to the type of wood in the barrel its matured in. Each plays an important part in the development of this special spirit. Once the process has begun there is no going back! To be classed, by law, as a scotch whisky, the spirit must be matured in a select oak barrel for a minimum of three years. After this time the producer can either begin to bottle or leave the spirit to mature for 5, 10, 12, 15, 18 years and so on. Some spirits are matured for 50+ years, this oak contact gives the whisky such a mature and rich taste, again, this is dependant on the style of whisky the producer intends to make

So when it comes to styles of Whisky, there are six regions in Scotland and they are:

Lowlands

Light, Grassy, Smooth, Subtle Spices

Highlands

Floral, Subtle Smoke, Wood, Fruit, Malt, Sweet

Speyside

Wood, Malt, Dried Fruit, Sweet Spice, Green Fruit

Islands

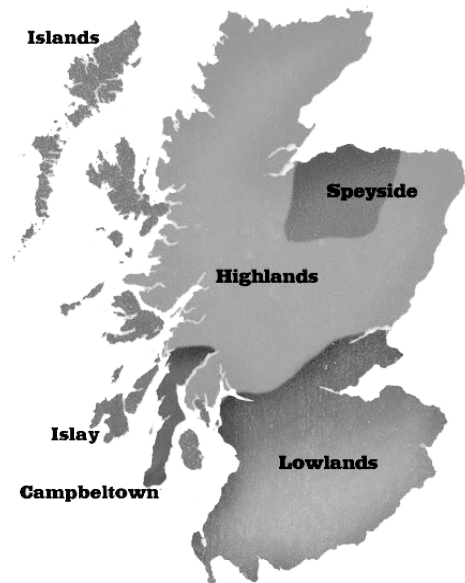

Smoke, Oily, Black Pepper Spice, Honey, Seasalt

Campbeltown

Seasalt, Smoke, Dried Fruit, Sweet Spices, Sweet

Islay

Smoke, Seasalt, Green Fruit, Medicinal
